Town of Highlands Consolidated Zoning Board of Appeals Applicant's Guide to the Appeals Process

Introduction

Any person aggrieved by a decision of the Building Inspector or Code Enforcement Officer may take an appeal to the Consolidated Zoning Board of Appeals. The matter appealed from is most commonly a notice of denial or refusal with respect to a building permit application. There are two (2) basic types of appeals to the board: 1. an appeal for the interpretation of the Zoning Code, and 2. an appeal for a variance. In making an appeal the burden of proof lies with the applicant and if the applicant does not prove his case the appeal will be denied. You may be represented by an attorney on the appeal to the board if you so desire.

Interpretations

An interpretation is a request to have the zoning board make a determination as to the meaning of a particular provision of the zoning code with respect to a particular set of facts and circumstances. If you are aggrieved because you believe the building inspector has misinterpreted the zoning code you may make an appeal. You must clearly identify the code provision upon which you wish to have an interpretation and must completely, clearly and accurately set forth the facts and circumstances to which the code provision applies. The zoning board cannot make an interpretation in a vacuum and if you fail to properly state the matter and completely set forth the facts it is unlikely that you will obtain the interpretation that you desire.

Variations

Variations are a form of extraordinary relief which allow a person to do something which is not ordinarily or normally allowed by the zoning code. A variance will not be granted unless you prove all the elements necessary to entitle you to a variance. The two basic types of variations are use and area variations. A use variance would allow you to conduct a particular type of activity in a zone where that activity is not normally permitted. An area variance will afford relief from the three (3) dimensional or "bulk" requirements such as lot sizes, set back, etc. The basic elements which must be proved are set forth below:

1. Unnecessary Hardship or Practical Difficulties

Unless the strict application of the zoning code will cause unnecessary hardship or practical difficulties regarding the utilization of the property you are not entitled to a variance and a variance will not be granted. The unnecessary hardship or practical difficulties must concern the use of the property and does not relate to the personal circumstances of the property owner. Illness or lack of financial resources is not the kind of hardship or practical difficulty referred to.

A. Unnecessary Hardship

This is the standard for granting of a use variance. An unnecessary hardship must be proved by showing that the land cannot yield a reasonable return if used for any of the purposes allowed in the zone. The proof submitted must be actual “dollars and cents” proof. The fact that the owner may obtain a better price or higher profit by the use being requested is irrelevant to proof of this element. A use variance will be denied if the hardship is self-created.

B. Practical Difficulties

This is the standard for the granting of an area variance. The practical difficulties relate to the physical features of the lot which inhibit the use of the lot within the dimensional standards of the zoning code. The applicant must show significant economic injury to prove practical difficulties. The relevant test is the difference in value of the parcel with and without the variance.

2. Uniqueness

No variance will be granted unless the hardship or practical difficulty is particular to the specific parcel and is not common to all properties within the zoning district. You must show how your property is different from others in the district in relation to the hardship or practical difficulty.

3. Spirit of the Zoning Law

The applicant must show that the granting of the variance will be within the general spirit of the zoning law. The variance requested must be the minimum necessary to grant the relief while conserving the essential character of the neighborhood and protecting the value of other properties in the zone. No variance will be granted where to do so will make a significant impact on the public health, safety, and welfare purposes for which the zoning code was implemented.

Conclusion

The above is intended to be a general outline concerning appeals to the zoning board. It is only a rough outline. The applicant must take responsibility for familiarization with both local and state code requirements.

Remember, the applicant must prove his/her case or the appeal will be denied. No hearings will be scheduled on incomplete applications.
